Introduction

As a leader in your organization, the decisions you make can have a significant impact on your company's financial health. This program will help you assess the value of your strategic decisions by giving you a broader understanding of finance and the interaction between business strategy and financial strategy. In this program, you will achieve a more sophisticated understanding of how the tools of modern finance can be used to evaluate investment opportunities and make capital structure and capital management decisions to drive organizational value.

Objectives

- Communicate more effectively with financial executives within the organization and with important external stakeholders such as analysts and investors
- Gain a sophisticated understanding of how to use financial statements to better understand the economics of other entities, including competitors.
- Obtain a deeper understanding of how your organization's economic outcomes are reflected in its financial statements, and how those statements are used inside and outside the organization.
- Develop a strong strategic intuition to make smart investment decisions.
- Learn how to manage external communications and capital to avoid unwanted attention from activist investors, short-sellers, and other corporate predators.
- Learn why optimizing management of capital, including liquidity and leverage, can affect firm value and how to value other businesses.
- Better understand how to use modern valuation techniques to evaluate investment opportunities, including M&A and LBOs.
- Understand entrepreneurial finance, including private equity and venture capital.
