Introduction

In the first decade of the 20th-century business and organizational researchers and writers have increasingly made it clear that the two key things that increasingly distinguish the most successful and top-performing organizations from those that are mere "also-rans" are strong strategic management and visionary leadership. Never has it been more important to move from merely managing organizations, focusing only on operational decisions, to strategic leadership. Without a clear and motivating vision and a skilled leadership team to move the organization towards the vision the successful organizations of today may not even survive the next decade.

Thus, effective strategic leadership is central to the future success of any organization. This starts with defining a clear strategic vision - setting out the leadership team's strategic intent for the organization and its various businesses. This then needs to be translated into an agenda for action - not merely a "strategic plan" but a set of guidelines or a road map clearly setting out where the business needs to go and empowering managers at all levels to make the multitude of decisions that they need to make in the clear understanding of where the business is heading.

But finally the organization needs managers to move from transactional management to transformational leadership. Real strategic management requires that leaders at all levels create the mindsets and behaviors that are needed to transform the organization from its existing paradigm to the new strategic paradigm that the vision sets forth. This new program will focus on the strategic thinking and leadership behaviors that a high-performance organization needs to guide it to a successful long terms future.
