Training Course: Compensation & Benefits Management

Training Course code: HR3028 From: 29 June - 3 July 2026 Venue: Paris (France) - Training Course Fees: 5775 € Euro

Introduction

In most organizations, human capital represents the largest cost center, making Compensation and Benefits C&B not just an administrative function, but a strategic lever for performance, retention, and competitiveness. Poorly designed reward systems can lead to disengagement, inequity, and high turnover, while well-structured systems can significantly enhance productivity, motivation, and organizational alignment.

This program provides a comprehensive journey from the foundations of compensation management to its strategic integration with business objectives. It equips participants with the analytical tools and frameworks required to evaluate, design, and optimize reward systems in a dynamic and evolving environment.

Participants will explore both technical elements job evaluation, pay structures, benchmarking and strategic dimensions employee engagement, performance-linked rewards, international compensation, and change management, enabling them to create reward systems that deliver value for money and sustainable organizational impact.

Program Objectives

By the end of this training program, participants will be able to:

- Understand and articulate reward philosophy and compensation strategy
- Analyze how compensation components align with organizational objectives
- Design and evaluate salary structures and benefits frameworks
- Apply job evaluation and market benchmarking techniques
- Integrate compensation systems with performance management and motivation models
- Assess the impact of compensation on employee engagement and retention
- Evaluate emerging and international compensation practices and trends
- Develop a practical toolkit for improving compensation systems
