Training Course: Successfully Managing People at Work

Training Course code: HR3032 From: 31 August - 4 September 2026 Venue: Singapore - Training Course Fees: 6250 Euro

Introduction

Organizations today are increasingly affected by the human side of performance—stress, personal challenges, disengagement, and psychological pressures that employees bring into the workplace. Contrary to the outdated assumption that individuals can separate personal and professional lives, modern workforce dynamics demonstrate that employee well-being is directly linked to productivity, engagement, and organizational sustainability.

Rising levels of workplace stress, burnout, job insecurity, and interpersonal conflict have made it essential for HR professionals and managers to adopt structured, proactive approaches to managing people-related challenges. Issues such as absenteeism, turnover, underperformance, and low morale are often symptoms of deeper psychological and environmental factors.

This program provides a comprehensive framework for understanding and addressing these challenges through stress management strategies, counseling techniques, motivation frameworks, and organizational interventions, including Employee Assistance Programs EAPs and trauma response systems. Participants will gain practical tools to support employees effectively while maintaining organizational performance and stability.
