Training Course: The HR Administrator's Role

Training Course code: HR3024 From: 21 - 25 December 2026 Venue: Paris (France) - Training Course Fees: 5775 € Euro

Introduction

The role of the HR Administrator has evolved far beyond routine administrative support into a critical operational and strategic enabler within modern organizations. Today's HR Administrators are expected to manage data intelligently, support decision-making processes, and contribute to organizational performance through efficient HR systems and practices.

This program provides a comprehensive understanding of how a world-class HR function operates, highlighting the integration between HR operations, data analytics, recruitment, performance management, and workforce planning. It also introduces participants to modern HR frameworks aligned with global best practices referenced by institutions such as the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development.

Participants will explore the new HR organizational map, understand the increasing importance of HR data and predictive forecasting, and learn how to support and enhance HR efficiency through structured processes and technology.

Program Objectives

By the end of this program, participants will be able to:

- Demonstrate how a world-class integrated HR function operates
- Understand and communicate the strategic value of HR within the organization
- Analyze the three key human capital elements: personality, competence, and performance
- Utilize modern tools and techniques to manage and analyze HR data effectively
- Support HR processes such as recruitment, performance management, and training
- Enhance administrative efficiency through process optimization and prioritization
- Contribute to improving HR service delivery and organizational alignment
